Gentrification fails to curb Bronzeville violence

Chicago Tribune

Kajaunce Morton placed his regular order for a cheeseburger, collected his change and waited for his food inside a South Side take-out restaurant popular with locals and police.

Suddenly, two males, with hoodies pulled up about their faces, charged in. One displayed a gun and pulled the trigger as Morton, 16, sought safety behind another customer. The gun jammed. He pulled the trigger again. The gun jammed again.

He pulled the trigger a third time. This time the weapon fired, striking Morton in the head.

Mortally wounded, Morton lay crumpled on the scuffed white linoleum floor inside Alice's Bar-B-Que, a few feet from a handwritten poster on which was written the biblical admonition: "Don't let the sun go down while you are angry, and do not give the devil a foothold."

Despite a wave of gentrification, violence has maintained a foothold on this commercial stretch of 43rd Street in Bronzeville. Morton's killing in July marked the second fatal shooting at the restaurant since its pit-master was mistakenly killed in a 2011 gang shooting while taking a smoke break outside. And the larger Grand Boulevard community, in the southern half of Bronzeville, has seen 38 killings over the past five years, about the same death toll as in the previous five years, Chicago police statistics show.

The violence has continued despite successful efforts to revitalize the Bronzeville area, once a booming African-American commercial district. On 43rd, the city is entertaining bids to redevelop properties, including a shuttered liquor store, in a three-block section a few blocks from Alice's Bar-B-Que.

Much of the violence is believed to be gang-related. The area around the restaurant has long been a hotbed of conflict among rival gangs and gang factions.

The violence has shaken Gregory Johnson, longtime owner of Alice's, named after his grandmother who ran a soul-food restaurant at 29th and State streets in the late 1930s and early 1940s.

"This is the worst I've seen it. It's frightening, let me tell you," he said in a recent interview at his restaurant. "I don't know what to do sometimes, whether to close the doors or what."

Johnson hopes the redevelopment and gentrification will drive down violent crime, but for now he keeps a watchful eye on his business. At his desk inside his office, two computer monitors show live feeds from a dozen security cameras installed around the restaurant.

"And that still ain't enough," he said of the cameras, chuckling. "I need a drone out there flying around. God have mercy on us."

With just 33 cents in his pocket, Morton was waiting for his food about 10 p.m. July 18 when a teen with whom he had been feuding happened to walk by and spotted Morton through the window facing 43rd, authorities said. The gunman, identified by prosecutors as Denzel "D Mac" Lewis, 16, walked in with an accomplice, charges allege.

Johnson did not witness the shooting but said a security camera captured the scene. Morton tried to make a run for the door but was unable to escape before his rival entered the restaurant.

Morton tried to hide behind a customer, "literally climbing on his back," Johnson said.

Gregory Johnson (above), owner of Alice's Bar-B-Que (left), talks about the July shooting of a 16-year-old boy that was captured by his security cameras. ZBIGNIEW BZDAK/TRIBUNE

When the gun fired, the bullet went through Morton's left hand and lodged in his head. He died the next day.

"With no remorse, cold-blooded," Johnson said. "It was frightening, I tell you, seeing somebody getting executed like that."

Lewis, who was convicted of aggravated robbery as a juvenile, was charged with first-degree murder this month and ordered held without bail. The accomplice has not been arrested.

Johnson, who has run Alice's since 1980, has thought of relocating but doesn't think there's a way to escape the violence plaguing the South Side.

"It's terrible, and it's not just here," he said. "It's all over the city, these young people just taking each other lives."

A devout Baptist who keeps a Bible on his desk, Johnson has religious messages scattered about his restaurant. A tattered old CeaseFire sticker that says, "Don't shoot I want to grow up," hangs from a door.

"I just hate to see two lives destroyed like that," Johnson said of the murder involving the two juveniles. "Sixteen ain't begun to live yet."

5 Chicagoans who should run for mayor

Liz Kozak

» redeye@tribune.com

» @SecondCityNetwork

Sure, Bill Clinton and President Obama both hit the town last week to support their boy Pat Quinn. But there's another election on the horizon in Chicago. And with Chicago Teachers Union president Karen Lewis' health concerns, we're all left wondering one thing: Who should run against Rahm how good would the movie be? With Ben Affleck as Rahm and Rosamund Pike as Amy?

We're predicting record-breaking box office—I mean, ballot box—turnout.

3. Bob Mariano, supermarket superstar

For real, you saw what he did with all those empty Dominick's stores. While the city struggles with its "repurposing" plans for the dozens of empty schools that the Board of Education closed, we see only one obvious choice: more Mariano's.

With this guy in charge, there'd be no more food deserts and a combo kombucha-oyster bar on every "L" train.

4. Doug Sohn, encased meat maestro

Now that Hot Doug's is shuttered (much to the grief of pretty much everyone), what's next for Doug Sohn? Here's a thought: He is the ideal candidate to take on Chicago's violence. After seeing the lines snaked down Roscoe every single day for 13 years—or 3.25 mayoral terms—it only makes sense that the same science is applied to get guns off our streets.

More hot dogs = less murder. Problem solved.

5. Aia Cooper, the "Mr. President, don't touch my girlfriend" girlfriend

All she wanted to do was her civic duty, and instead, Aia Cooper is making headlines for some "hilarious" (c'mon, this guy's no Hannibal Buress) comment her fiancée made to President Obama.

Guess what, girlfriend? You're ready to run. You have a knack for being in the right place at the right time. You stole focus from the leader of the free world and got him to kiss you in like two minutes flat. You survived your first full-blown sex scandal and came out on top with media appearances up the wazoo. People adore you. And you did nothing. Just like a real politician!

Most importantly, you kept your cool even though your significant other called you his "girlfriend" instead of his "fiancée." Most engaged women would find that, in the words of Brandon Marshall, unacceptable.

Emanuel? (Because, Fioretti who?)

Here are five names we'd like to see on the ballot this February.

1. Brandon Marshall, Bears wide receiver

Anyone who saw him handle his business after last Sunday's game knows future mayor Marshall is ready for office. With his rock-solid "protect, execute, adjust" strategy, who wouldn't want to see this guy take charge of our city, and, more specifically, the crapshoot Cutler of apps: ParkChicago?

Why does it force you to reload our accounts with $20 every time you just wanna extend your time five minutes to run into Starbucks? And why can't you extend your time just five minutes instead of this stupid 30-minute minimum? And did I seriously get a ticket in the two-minute window when I was trying to get a wireless connection to add more time? But once in a while, it works great and makes life wonderful. You never know which app you're going to get. "UNACCEPTABLE!"

2. Amy Rule, first lady of Chicago

For the most part, she stays out of the spotlight, but we bet Mrs. Rahm Emanuel has just been keeping a low profile before she springs onto the political scene—like the Internet on Renee Zellweger's face.

Talk about drama! Can you imagine how fun this election would be if we had some sort of Shonda Rhimes-style TV tension thrown into the mix? "How to Get Away with Murdering Your Mayor Husband in the Polls." And then

“Can you imagine how fun this election would be if we had some sort of Shonda Rhimes-style TV tension thrown into the mix?”

CTA: NO FARE HIKES IN 2015

Proposed 2015 budget increases rail service during rush hour

By Tracy Swartz | REDEYE

CTA riders will not have to pay more for fares next year, but they will see an increase in rail service during rush hour, according to the transit agency's proposed 2015 budget released early Monday.

The freezing of fares is good news for riders who last year endured an increase in the cost of unlimited ride passes and the price of rides from O'Hare Airport, from $2.25 to $5.

The CTA is proposing a $1.44 billion operating budget in 2015 that is about 4 percent higher than this year's $1.38 billion operating budget and depends on ridership gains.

In a statement, CTA President Forrest Claypool credited management reforms for paring down the $308 million deficit he inherited when he took over leadership of the agency in 2011. The Tribune reported this month that Claypool has fired about 900 employees during his tenure, more than 8 percent of the agency's total positions.

The CTA board has to approve the final budget, which pays for one of the largest increases in rail service since the agency's 2012 plan to make buses and trains less crowded by adding service to 48 bus routes and nearly every rail route.

The controversial 2012 decrowding plan included cuts to about a dozen partial or full CTA bus routes. No cuts or increases to bus service were listed in the proposed 2015 budget plan.

"Current systemwide bus service has adequate capacity to absorb a slight increase in ridership," CTA spokesman Brian Steele said in an e-mail to RedEye.

By year's end, the CTA expects to log 518.9 million rides, a 2 percent decrease from the 532.2 million trips in 2013. The agency expects to record 284 million bus rides, a 5.4 percent decrease versus 2013 and 234.9 million train rides, a 2.5 percent increase.

The agency projects 522.5 million rides in 2015.

"This spending plan not only maintains vital transit service in neighborhoods across the city, it continues unprecedented investment to modernize the system to benefit riders today while building a strong foundation for the future," Mayor Emanuel said in a statement about the proposal released over the weekend.

The increase in rush-hour rail trips comes as more riders have been shifting from bus to train. About 54 percent of the CTA rides are on bus while 46 percent are on rail. In 2008, 62 percent of rides were on bus while 38 percent were on rail.

BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE FILE

Added rush-hour service for the Red Line (above) started in September, while added trips for the Blue Line (right) will begin next year if the proposal is passed.

This year, rail ridership is up 4.8 percent compared with 2013 while bus ridership is down 9.2 percent, according to CTA data through July. The CTA has blamed declining bus ridership this year on the polar vortex and the completion of the southern Red Line project last year that saw buses replace trains.

Southern Red Line service is up and running this year, eliminating the need of shuttle bus service that padded CTA bus ridership numbers last year.

Still, bus ridership has been declining year over year for more than a year and a half, according to CTA data. The CTA said there has been a nationwide shift from bus to rail ridership.

On the rail side, riders will see a continuation of projects next year including a four-year, $492 million upgrade of the O'Hare branch of the Blue Line and connecting subway; a $203 million modernization of the Wilson Red Line stop in Uptown; and a $240 million rehab of the 95th Street Red Line station in the Roseland area.

The CTA also anticipates next year completing preliminary studies on the effect the long-awaited extension of the Red Line to 130th Street would have on surrounding neighborhoods and the modernization of the northern end of the Red Line that would include upgrading four stations and constructing a controversial flyover near the Belmont stop in Lakeview.

Bus projects include the addition of new 40-foot diesel Nova buses, replacing buses more than a decade old. The CTA also is expected next year to complete the implementation of its new software to track the location of every in-service CTA bus in real-time to improve bus bunching and gaps in service, two areas that the CTA has struggled with this year.

A public hearing about the budget is set for 6 p.m. Nov. 17 at CTA headquarters, 567 W. Lake St.

New rush-hour service

The CTA could add rush-hour rail service in 2015, if the proposed budget is passed.

BLUE LINE

2 additional rush-hour trips.

ORANGE LINE

2 additional rush-hour trips.

The budget proposal also cites changes that are taking effect in 2014, including:

Additional rush-period service on the Red, Brown and Purple lines (began Sept. 29).

RED LINE

2 morning and 2 evening rush-hour trips on weekdays

PURPLE LINE

1 additional evening rush-hour trip on weekdays

BROWN LINE

1 additional morning weekday rush-period trip

Additional service on the Brown line (to begin Sunday):

Sunday late-night and early-morning service will run between the Kimball stop and the Loop instead of ending at the Belmont stop in Lakeview

Chicago police and transit authorities demonstrate the new security measures able to test for explosive compounds at the Clinton "L" station Friday.

Police to check bags for explosives

Screenings will start next week at CTA 'L' stations

By Tracy Swartz | REDEYE

Riders and a public transit expert expressed skepticism about a Chicago police plan to stop some rush-hour riders before they pass through rail station turnstiles to screen their bags for explosives.

There is "no known terrorist threat" that prompted the new procedure slated to begin the week of Nov. 3, Nancy Lipman, Chicago police commander for public transportation, said Friday at a news conference announcing the initiative.

Chicago police spokesman Marty Maloney says the security measure is a "proactive, protective measure."

"We know that surface transportation has been targeted in other places in the past [Madrid, New York, London, Russia] and want to take whatever precautions possible," Maloney told RedEye.

Amtrak and the New York City and Washington transit stations employ a similar screening measure, Lipman said. While officials won't disclose the pricetag for the CTA security initiative, it is being fully funded with part of a $3.5 million federal anti-terrorism grant.

Some CTA riders Friday said they were concerned that passengers stopped for bag checks could opt out of the procedure. Joseph Schwieterman, a DePaul professor specializing in transportation issues, said it's difficult for mass transit systems to provide airport-level security.

"Unfortunately, it's needle in a haystack trying to identify vulnerabilities in mass transit systems," Schwieterman said. "We have hundreds and hundreds of access points to our stations."

Chicago police say they will randomly select one rail station each day to set up the screening table outside the rail turnstiles during rush hour. Lipman said most of the stations will be downtown but other stops will be included as well.

A team of four to five officers will man the table, which will have two explosives testing machines.

Police will approach riders, whom they have randomly selected by picking a random number that morning, Lipman said.

For example, if police pick the number 10, they will ask the 10th person who enters the station, then the 20th and so on, Lipman said.

Police say they will swab the outside of the bags but will not open them during the test.

Cloth rubbed on the bag is inserted into the testing machine. At that point, a positive or negative result registers on the machine's screen.

Riders who pass the test are free to enter the turnstiles. Officers will ask to inspect the bags of riders who fail the test. Police say the machines are testing the presence of explosives, not drugs.

The whole process should take "less than a minute," Lipman said during the Friday press conference at the Clinton stop on the Green and Pink lines. "We expect it to have no impact on a customer's commute time."

Riders who refuse to have their bag swabbed won't be allowed to get on the train—in fact they'll be ordered to leave the station. But they can head to another station to board the train, police said.

Or, if police suspect the rider is involved in "further suspicious activity, and if we determine that probable cause exists to stop him/her for questioning, we might do so," Maloney said. Riders who say no to the swabbing but try to enter that station's turnstiles face arrest, police say.

The screenings at stations will occur "several times a week," police said.

Michael Garcia, 30, said he typically carries a backpack when he rides CTA trains from Skokie to the Midway Airport Orange Line every day for work. Garcia said he would agree to testing if he is asked but questioned whether there could be a better process.

"If they swab one random person's bag, what about the next person who might have something?" Garcia asked. "I think it's just a waste of money and time."

CTA spokesman Brian Steele said the screenings will be performed during rush hour so riders won't have to worry about missing their train if they undergo the test because of continual train service.

More than 229 million CTA rail rides were taken in 2013. The CTA has more than 140 rail stations.

Tim Looney, who typically rides the Brown Line to the Clark/Lake Loop station for work, said he doesn't believe this program will be successful because riders can opt out of the screenings.

"It seems like the way they're announcing it, they're letting us know you can just leave the station and go to the next station if you had a bomb in your bag. To me, I just don't imagine too many people would get caught," said Looney, of Andersonville.

City wants universal app for hailing taxis

Chicago Tribune

The rapidly expanding rides-for-hire industry in Chicago is undergoing more change Monday. Customers will no longer be able to arrange a regular taxi or a black-car pickup using Hailo, one of several smartphone apps that have debuted to a strong reception from consumers who appreciate shorter wait times and the ability to prearrange payment using a credit card. London-based Hailo, citing “astronomical marketing” costs and difficulties competing with other technology companies, ended operations Sunday across the U.S. and Canada. Now, the city of Chicago is preparing to enter the contest. It will implement one or more universal smartphone apps to connect riders with the closest available taxi among all cabs in the city rather than a customer hailing online from a specific company. The apps are designed to provide one-stop shopping for taxis and also “can help level the playing field” between taxis and ride-sharing services, city officials said.

Instead of coming directly from private vendors, the Chicago Department of Business Affairs and Consumer Protection is preparing to solicit bids from companies to develop at least one universal app the public can use to order taxis, officials said.

The winner of the contract will have the de facto backing of the city, just as the Chicago Department of Transportation partnered with Alta Bicycle Share to create the Divvy bicycle-sharing rental program.

The city “wants to ensure that a competitive procurement process is followed and respected” in connection with the universal app, said Mika Stambaugh, spokeswoman for the Department of Business Affairs and Consumer Protection, which regulates the rides-for-hire industry in Chicago.

The top priorities for the universal app are that “riders find it easy enough to use, and, most importantly, are protected.”

Survey: split pedestrian, cyclist lanes on lakefront

By Rachel Cromidas | REDEYE

If the loud chorus from the public is any indication, Chicago's lakefront path finally could get the separate cyclist and pedestrian lanes for which frequent users have been begging, under state plans to overhaul North Lake Shore Drive.

The Illinois Department of Transportation released a list of the top ideas for revamping North Lake Shore Drive and the lakefront earlier this week that were submitted by members of the public online or during open planning meetings. Separating various users of the lakefront path topped the list; right now cyclists, pedestrians and others share the path.

Since 2012, city and state transportation planners have been collecting and studying suggestions on how to transform the 80-year-old, 7-mile stretch of the drive from Navy Pier north to where it ends in Edgewater. They are expecting to begin the massive construction project, which could cost up to $1 billion in federal transportation dollars and take a decade to complete, no earlier than 2019.

Though the most costly parts of the project could be efforts to revamp the roadway for motorists, the Top 5 suggestions on how to improve Lake Shore Drive and the parallel trail had little to do with driving.

More than 260 commenters who have participated so far have said they would like to see separate lakefront trail pathways for cyclists and pedestrians. Next on the list, with 185 comments, are suggestions for improving public transit service on the drive. That could include installing an exclusive Bus Rapid Transit lane, increasing bus service or installing a light rail, the report said. And third on the list is a suggestion to improve east-west access to the lakefront trail at various points along the drive, with 134 comments.

In addition, planners also are soliciting ideas from the Chicago Park District and members of the public, as well as transportation experts and preservationists around the state about the best way to improve the area. Members of the public have been able to submit ideas via an online form or in person at planning meetings.

To reduce congestion on the lakefront path and keep joggers, cyclists, roller-bladers, pedestrians and beachgoers from colliding, the project might install boardwalks on the beaches or build multiple new trail paths, according to Guy Tridgell, an Illinois Department of Transportation spokesman. ### Top suggestions

The five most popular suggestions for revamping Lake Shore Drive and the lakefront trail:

1. Create separate routes or lanes for cyclists and pedestrians on the Lakefront Trail (263 comments)
2. Improve public transit service (185)
3. Improve access to the Lakefront Trail on east-to-west paths for pedestrians and cyclists (134)
4. Create elevated portions of the Lakefront Trail and build pedestrian tunnels at various trail points to reduce congestion (104)
5. Add more trees and landscaped sections to the Lakefront Trail or along the Drive. (101) summer months, the lakefront path sees as many as 31,000 daily users, according to IDOT surveys.

The volume of suggestions focusing on improving the lakefront trail and increasing public transportation on the lakefront could mean more people want to traverse the corridor without cars, said Kyle Whitehead, a project director at the local advocacy group Active Transportation Alliance.

"More people are looking to move through that corridor every year, and realistically there's not space to widen or add lanes" to the drive, he said. "That would mean expanding access to alternative modes of transportation, and that's why we're seeing enthusiasm for making it safer or easier to ride your bike or walk and take public transit."

The next public meeting on the makeover of North Lake Shore Drive is slated for the summer of 2015, but members of the public can submit a comment anytime online at public.commentworks.com/nlsd/northlake-shoredrivecommentform.

AND NOW... THE FINALISTS FOR REDEYE'S FIRST BIG IDEA AWARDS

RedEye

For the first time in our 12-year history, RedEye is preparing to help push Chicago entrepreneurs to the next level with an event we call the Big Idea Awards. We recruited talented contestants in four categories—Food & Drink, Arts & Design, Technology and Community—and encouraged them to share their Big Idea, what it would mean for the city and how they would benefit from the contest. After narrowing down the finalists from a pool of super-talented applicants, we held an online vote to determine the Final 16. Now we're ready to share those names with you.

FOOD & DRINK

Nicole Triebe—Windy City Dinner Fairy: home-delivered healthy meals
Cedric Combs, Owen Meyer and Chris Lindsey—Liquor Lab: social mixology experiment
Eric Stein—Enlightened Flavors: premium sorbets
Rickie Perez—Logan Oyster Socials: Chicago's traveling oyster bar

ARTS & DESIGN

Erin Diehl—Improve it!: improv corporate training that supports charity
Kyle Eertmoed—Handiemail: handwriting service turns typed letters into handwritten words
Christopher Breiler—bio-safe phone and tablet case with disinfecting wipes
Patrick Cunningham and Corrina Crade—MogaMind: yoga for the mind

TECHNOLOGY

Raphael Barreda and Matt Mur—Chicago's continual content creation incubator
Andrew Scarpelli—Public DIY biology hackspace
Karl Steltenpohl and Frank Pope—GoReturnMe: cloud-based reward if found
Sara Seibt—Darling: finding your perfect FURever match

COMMUNITY

Anthony Sturdivant—Think Before You Shoot: To create change, think change
Thomas Boyle and Tim Puczkowskyj—Tiny Homes Community: tiny, solar-powered, highly sustainable homes on unused Chicago land
Zhazha Casanova—

Alex Dangerfield and Keenan Coke—The Culture Workshop: hip-hop education for our youth

SO WHAT'S NEXT?

The Big Idea Awards event, set for 7 p.m. Nov. 14 at Chop Shop (2033 W. North Ave.). Here, you'll meet each contestant, talk about his or her idea and vote for your favorite in each category—and enjoy complimentary drinks and snacks. Don't underestimate your power—live, in-person voting is the only way for a Big Idea contestant to win a prize package including a mentorship with a top Chicago entrepreneur, print advertising in RedEye, a Mexican vacation courtesy of Apple Vacations and RIU Hotels, a small business membership and a $250 gift card from the Chicagoland Chamber of Commerce.

Wash. state shooting baffles Native American community

MARYSVILLE, Wash. Members of a tight-knit Native American community in Washington state were struggling Sunday to comprehend how a lifelong friendship among cousins ended with one of them gunning down the other two, along with three friends, in a high school cafeteria.

The shooter and one girl, identified by a family friend as Zoe Galasso, were killed, while the other freshmen students were gravely wounded in the Friday morning shooting at Marysville-Pilchuck High School, an hour's drive north of Seattle.

The rampage sent shock waves through the Tulalip Tribes, a Native American organization that operates two casinos and an outlet mall, and beyond to Marysville, population 63,000.

"For our generation, we couldn't have even fathomed something like this," said Marysville resident Frank Ripley. "For some of these kids, they've now heard about it so many times ... they almost in a way are desensitized to it."

While police have not officially identified the gunman, family members told Reuters 14-year-old Jaylen Fryberg was the shooter, and the two male victims were his cousins, Nate Hatch and Andrew Fryberg, ages 14 and 15.

Hatch, in serious condition with a gunshot to the jaw, improved Sunday, while Andrew Fryberg was in critical condition with a gunshot wound to the head, hospital officials said.

Female victims Shaylee Chucklunaskit and Gia Soriano, both 14, remained in critical condition at a different hospital, officials said. The shooter carried a .40 caliber handgun which he used to kill himself, police said.

Family and tribal members recalled that the boys, especially Jaylen and Hatch, seemed like best friends, growing up doors away from each other near Marysville.

"You would think there was some animosity that caused it but they were the best of friends, they were like brothers," Don Hatch, Nate's grandfather, told Reuters. "All of us wonder why, but we are trying to pray together and heal and forge on."

2014 Regular Season • Week 8

BEARS

BYE.

The Bears need a break—or whatever the Patriots are on

RedEye

For as popular as it might be to make fun of Brandon Marshall's "unacceptable" outburst, it's not as if he was wrong. With the bye week on the horizon, the Bears had

| NFC NORTH |   |   |     |
|-----------|---|---|-----|
|           | W | L | GB  |
| Detroit   | 6 | 2 | —   |
| Green Bay | 5 | 2 | 1/2 |
| BEARS     | 3 | 5 | 3   |
| Minnesota | 3 | 5 | 3   |

a chance to revive their season by upsetting Tom Brady and the Patriots in New England on Sunday.

Then the first half happened.

38-7. Those 38 points were the most the Bears had ever allowed in a first half, a meltdown punctuated by three New England touchdowns in 57 seconds just before halftime. We'll ignore the second half because, well, that will just make the 51-23 disaster look worse. TRIBUNE CONTRIBUTED.

THE NUMBERS

0 Jay Cutler throw in Brandon Marshall's direction three times and Martellus Bennett's way once. They had zero catches, and one of those passes to Marshall ended in an interception on a hail mary at the end of the half.

100% New England scored on all five of its first-half drives. Four touchdowns and a field goal. They also returned a Cutler fumble for a TD.

15 When you're getting pummeled as badly as the Bears were, you get frustrated. Which leads to Kyle Long pulling Patriots linebacker Akeem Ayers—WWE-style—off Cutler by one leg after a pileup and drawing a 15-yard penalty for unnecessary roughness. You salute a guy for sticking up for his QB, but the refs aren't paid to be sympathetic.

1 Embarrassing stiff-arms on Chris Conte are becoming commonplace. It happened again Sunday, though if you were too busy burying your head in your hands at that point, you would have missed it.

22-9 That would be New England's first-half first down total compared with the Bears'.

298-119 New England out-gained the Bears by this sizable margin in the first 30 minutes, too.

53, 23, 99 That would be the jersey numbers for Darryl Sharpton, Kyle Fuller and Lamarr Houston. Sharpton and Fuller left the game in the first half with injuries, and Houston hurt himself celebrating a meaningless sack in the fourth quarter. Starting linebackers Lance Briggs and Jonathan Bostic were out from the start, too. How much more punishment can this defense take?

ANYTHING TO SAY FOR YOURSELVES?

“Come on, put y’all’s ears closer to the door.”

—Brandon Marshall, to reporters waiting for the Bears locker room to open after Sunday’s loss

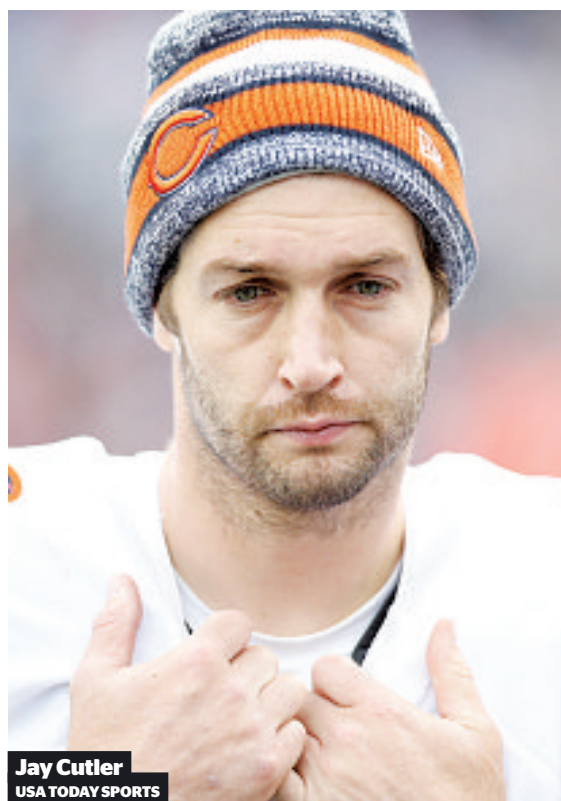

BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE

“We got out-played and out-coached in all three phases. We couldn’t keep up the pace. ... I told [the players] that we’re going to define ourselves by the way we play the second half, because the first half was inexcusable.”

—Bears coach
Marc Trestman

“He’s got a knee [injury], and I’m very disappointed for him.”

—Trestman, on
Lamar Houston

Jay Cutler
USA TODAY SPORTS

“Agonizing. We got behind pretty quickly and didn’t make it much of a ballgame.”

—Jay Cutler, on how he felt about the final two minutes of the first half

“As a whole, we have decide how we’re going to end this year. Are we going to pack it in and hover around .500 ... or try to make a run at this?”

—Cutler

“I think everyone’s surprised. You don’t expect to go out and get beat like that.”

—Cutler

“You’ve just gotta own the mistakes.”

—Bears defensive end Jared Allen

BEARS BRAIN TEASER ANSWER

By Mick Swasko | REDEYE

This week, the Bears took on New England and Gisele’s husband, Tom Brady, who made them look sad. In July, Forbes reported the supermodel makes $128,000 per day, making it no surprise she and Brady could afford a mansion with a moat. They sold that house to Dr. Dre earlier this year for a handsome sum.

Given Jay Cutler’s 2014 base salary, how many days would he have to work at that rate to save enough to buy the moat mansion from Dre, if the asking price were the same?

ANSWER: Jay Cutler’s 2014 base salary is $22.5 million, meaning he makes about $61,644 per day. To buy the $40 million mansion, he’d have to work 649 days at that salary to amass that amount ($40,000,000 divided by $61,644 equals 648.8, so rounding up you get 649).

We’ll reveal the winner via Twitter on Monday. Thanks to all who entered, and look for the next challenge after the Bears bye week!

| 1 | Entering the bye week, the Bears are ...                      | ... saying bye to the playoffs.                             | ... awful. Just not good. Bad. They have, like, the worst defense. And, they just royally suck.    | ... sure not to lose, unless their defense is playing somewhere and Jay is pressured at Jewel in the produce section!             | ... ruining my Sundays on the regular.                         | ... wondering if they can just play Atlanta every week from now on.   |
| 2 | If drama is Brandon Marshall's fuel, what's Jay Cutler's?     | Pure, unadulterated apathy.                                 | Jay Cutler's body runs on disappointment, a lack of sleep and throwing the ball to the other team. | Hahahahaha, his hair? Wait, the weird tick he does with his shoulder.   | Labrador puppy souls.  | Marlboros? Nah, Cut might be the only white person on Earth who smokes Newports.  |
| 3 | How did Illinois celebrate its rare Big Ten win this weekend? | By hoping that they never wake up so the dream doesn't end. | ALL OF THE MALORT.   | Ticker-tape parade through downtown Champaign! But it reminded the admin that it's time to clean house and fire the staff.        | Lots of champagne!   | Burning Kam's to the ground? Does Kam's still exist? #Old   |
| 4 | Convince Joe Maddon to manage the Cubs.                       | Come on, I may be a jerk but doing that is downright evil.  | No.  | Joe, it's been 106 years. Look at it like you're the second coming. Plus, Wrigleyville is FUN in the summer! Lets go to Bernie's! | Up for a challenge? Well then I've got a franchise for you ... | Bro, come to town! We'll take a trip down Southport for a non-stop cougar buffet, if you smell what I'm cooking.        |
| 5 | What will be the theme of Derrick Rose's next shoe?           | "The Return 2. This time for sure. We think."               | If it's anything like his personality or postgame interviews, it'll put you to sleep.              | If he gets injured before Christmas, "Derrick's Geriatric Support Shoe."  | "The Boost 6: The MVP Returns."                                | Hold up! Wanna give a shout out to my biggest fan @WRT312. Remember! It's been 703 days since FSU lost a game! Love ya! |

Thumbs almost up for Butler

Jimmy Butler didn't participate in Sunday's Bulls practice, but he used his left hand as his guide hand while getting up shots afterward. Butler, who missed the last two preseason games after spraining his left thumb, previously hadn't been able to use his left hand at all. Neither coach Tom Thibodeau nor Butler know if Butler will be ready for Wednesday's opener in New York.

Hats off to Paulie

Newly retired White Sox great Paul Konerko was named co-winner of the 2014 Roberto Clemente Award, along with Philadelphia's Jimmy Rollins. Both were honored before Game 3 of the World Series on Friday in San Francisco. The award recognizes players for their positive contributions on and off the field. "Jennifer and I are truly humbled to receive an award named after such a special player and person," Konerko said in a statement, referring to his wife. "This award caps off what has been a special final season for me."

Good show, England

The NFL will play five games in London next season, according to a London Daily Mail report. Three games have been slated for the city this season; Miami defeated Oakland in September, Detroit beat Atlanta on Sunday and Dallas will play Jacksonville in November. All three games sold out.

Barkley sounds off

According to a recent report, Seattle Seahawks quarterback Russell Wilson has been criticized by teammates as not being "black enough." Charles Barkley isn't buying it. "For some reason we are brainwashed to think, if you're not a thug or an idiot, you're not black enough," he told a CBS radio station in Philadelphia. "It's a dirty, dark secret in the black community."

THE FINISH LINE

» Blackhawks 2, Ottawa 1 » World Series: San Francisco 5, Kansas City 0 (Giants lead 3-2)

Still feeling chronic pain from your injury or surgery?

Anyone can have chronic pain.

Sometimes surgery, an injury, or an accident can result in chronic nerve pain. Nerve pain is often described as a shooting, burning or stabbing sensation. Some of the incidents that can result in this type of nerve pain include:

• Injuries • Surgeries • Accidents • Falls • Burns

Our clinic is conducting a clinical research study to examine the safety and effectiveness of an investigational medication in reducing chronic nerve pain when compared with placebo (inactive substance).

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Pay attention to your intuition. Maybe you'll sense that someone in your circle is interested in you, even if this person is acting shy. It could be time to take action.

Taurus April 20-May 20

This is a good week to work on improving your relationship. If you've been in a rocky one, don't give up just yet. The sun hints that there's something you're not seeing clearly.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

You might have a premonition about what you really want to be when you grow up. Jupiter is bringing you a sense of what your ideal future can be. You could realize something important about life and love.

Gemini May 21-June 21

A wild feeling is in the air. You'll want to dance naked or chant strange, primal sounds. Or you could just make passionate love to your honey. The moon says anything goes, and it's up to you to decide how to proceed.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You and your honey will enjoy spending time together as the moon creates a feeling of light-hearted fun. Take a day trip together or go out to dinner at a new place. Put yourself in a fresh setting.

Cancer June 22-July 22

You're in a mellow mood, thanks to the moon. Even if your partner is stressed out, you'll be able to remain calm and centered. Share that vibe with others who could use an encouraging word or two.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You have a way with words. But sometimes people don't appreciate your playful sense of humor. Your honey could be dealing with something stressful during this Saturn transit and might not be in a joking mood.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Don't let yourself get too grumpy this week, even though you'll probably want to sit and sulk. A moon opposition is reminding you of all the things that are upsetting in your personal life. You need to find a distraction.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

You could reconnect with an ex as the moon creates some strange encounters. You're over this person, but it might be useful to talk to him or her again. You could realize something important about yourself.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

You're experiencing more stability than you have in a while. Your romantic situation isn't as crazy, and you feel better about your current professional path. Mars will continue to help you over the next few weeks.

Aries March 21-April 19

You'll get into a discussion with somebody sexy this week, and sparks will fly. You won't be sure if you hate this person or love him or her. Mercury is creating some confusion. Take time to sort out your true feelings.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

You and your honey could clash over money matters. The moon is reminding you that both of you need to be on the same page about finances. If one of you is paying all the bills, this needs to change.

Billy Dec (center) guest stars on CBS' "Criminal Minds" as Detective Paul Rosado.

Dec does detective work in CBS cameo

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

» lgomez@tribune.com
» @TribLuis

You know it's a special occasion when you see Billy Dec without a hat.

The CEO of Rokit Ranch Productions—which owns Sunda, The Underground and Rokit Bar & Grill, among other places—rarely is seen in public without a hat but made an exception for his cameo on CBS'

"Criminal Minds." Dec plays Detective Paul Rosado in the episode, which airs Wednesday and revolves around a boy who goes missing while trick-or-treating on Halloween.

"I was in LA for eight days filming this part on random streets, in the hills, in their huge production studios," Dec said by email. "I was running all over the place with a bulletproof vest, a gun, a suit—pretty cool. I've done a bunch of movies that have come through Chicago where I would audition and land a scene or two, but not seven or eight scenes like 'Criminal Minds.'"

Dec played a cop in his cameo in the "A Nightmare on Elm Street" remake and in the independent film "Chasing Grace," which is scheduled for a 2015 release. He also made cameos on NBC's "Friends," thanks to his friend David Schwimmer, and will appear in the "Entourage" movie (his scene is with Gary Busey), thanks to his buddy Jeremy Piven.

"Criminal Minds" stars another Dec pal: Joe Mantegna. According to Dec, he landed this role on his own, without Mantegna's help.

Dec said a "Criminal Minds" writer reached out to him after seeing him on CNN's "Chicagoland" and told him to audition. The director passed on Dec following the video audition, which Dec said "felt horrible." He was given another opportunity to audition and was told to loosen up. Dec worked with an acting coach before trying out again, and this time landed the part.

"I specifically didn't reach out to Joe," Dec said. "He has been a friend for a long time, but I really wanted to win this on my own. Joe didn't know until the week of. He was excited and impressed."

Is it Mindy or Malala?

Malala Yousafzai

No, "The Mindy Project" star Mindy Kaling hasn't won a Nobel Prize—not yet, anyway—but she has been mistaken for a Nobel Prize winner. In an article published Friday by the New York Times, Kaling revealed that earlier this month during The New Yorker Festival, a "tippy man in his 80s" thought she was 17-year-old Pakistani activist Malala Yousafzai. When "Today" co-host Willie Geist jokingly congratulated Kaling on her prestigious prize, she tweeted back: "thanks Willie. Is it bad that my first reaction was 'YES!!! SHE IS 17!!!'?"

He's aliiiiive!

You can't believe everything you read on the Internet. "Reports" circulated Sunday morning that "Breakfast Club" star Judd Nelson was found dead Saturday night, but the rumors quickly were put to rest (sorry, bad choice of words). According to the Los Angeles Times, Nelson's agent hustled to Nelson's home Sunday morning to take a picture of the actor with the front page of Sunday's Times as living proof. Nelson's manager also pointed out that the actor is in "perfect" shape and just shot an episode of the upcoming TV series "Empire," which films in Chicago. So at least he got a little PR out of it all.

THE DIGIT $20M

"Ouija" scared up $20 million at the box office this weekend, according to Forbes. Despite getting little love from the critics, the board game-inspired movie hit the right hair-raising notes with teens and young adults, with 75 percent of audiences younger than 25.

Not so yesterday

Are Hilary Duff and husband Mike Comrie taking a detour on their way to Splitsville? The "Lizzie McGuire" actress and the retired NHL player were seen together at the Casamigos Halloween Party in West Hollywood on Friday night, according to E! online. The still-married couple were photographed holding hands at the party and were seen together again the next day shopping for Halloween decor with their son, adding to a long list of PDA-filled sightings since they announced their decision to separate in January.

QUOTE

"The three were a force of iconic moments as they pivoted around Paris, the mecca of fashion during the last fashion shows this month: the Nick and Nora Charles of our times, the Liz and Dick Burton, without the brawls."

—Vogue contributing editor and former "America's Next Top Model" judge Andre Leon Talley, in an article crowning Kanye West, Kim Kardashian and baby North the "First Fashion Family"
